Understanding How Botox Works on Wrinkles

After years of repetitive facial expressions and movements, wrinkles are inevitable. For example, your facial muscles contract when you frown, squint, smile, or laugh. The muscle contractions cause creases or grooves in the face to form—these are known as dynamic wrinkles or expression lines. As the natural collagen production in our bodies slows as we age, these wrinkles become more noticeable and, eventually, permanent. You may see this form of wrinkling on your forehead, around the eyes, the eyebrows, and the mouth—the areas in which you are most expressive.

Botox injections help smooth out wrinkle creases and grooves by relaxing the muscles responsible for them. During your injections, your provider injects small amounts of the toxin into the desired treatment area. Then, the neuromodulator paralyzes the muscles—allowing the overlying skin to relax and smooth out for about 3-4 months.

Botox Before and Afters

Botox before and after results from actual patients highlight the results you can expect after Botox injections. As with all cosmetic injections, results will vary per person.* However, the images show the antiaging results typical after traditional, quality Botox treatments. People love how much younger and refreshed they look. Most people achieve noticeable and visible improvements to their appearance, including decreased wrinkling and creases, a more rejuvenated appearance, and a more youthful look.

Since Botox is a skill-sensitive procedure, you must pick the most experienced provider in your area for optimal results.

Botox Risks and Side Effects

Why do so many people pick Botox injections over invasive procedures that may produce longer-term results? Well, Botox is a much safer option. In fact, the risks and side effects are minimal if you go to a reputable injection specialist.

Typical Botox side effects include:

- Redness
- Swelling
- Tenderness
- Bruising

All side effects are confined to the treatment area and will clear up on their own within a few days.
